FROM THE EDITOR

etaphysician, exegete and poet, Utpaldeva is undoubtedly one of the most remarkable figures in the history of the non-dualist Shaivite philosophy of Kashmir. While as the author of Pratyabhijñā Kārikā he takes us to the heights of Shaiva metaphysical thought, as the writer of one of the most poignant works of Sanskrit hymnal poetry, the Shivastotrāvalī, he makes us fathom the great depths of devotional Shaivism. The intensity of his mystic experience, the powerful passion of his spiritual quest and the spontaneous beauty of his lyrical expression have profoundly moved hearts of his readers through the centuries. Ishwarswaroop Swami Lakshmanjoo would be emotionally so overwhelmed by the ardour of Utpaldeva's love for Shiva that tears would often gush from his eyes while reciting a song from this series of twenty beautiful devotional lyrics. In fact it was the irresistibly sweet melody of Shivastotrāvalī verses that lured him first to study Sanskrit during his childhood after he heard his father sing a few lines from the work. Ever afterwards Shivastotrāvalī remained one of his most favourite Shaiva texts. His fondness of this great poetical work by Utpaldeva can be gauged from the fact that he rendered it into three languages, Kashmiri, Hindi and English, explaining in a state of palpable ecstasy the nuances of the deep mystical meanings of its verses. Of these the Kashmiri version is available only in audio recordings while the Hindi translation has been published by the Ishwar Ashram Trust. After years of devoted labour, John Hughes of the Universal Shaiva Fellowship, USA, has now brought out Swamiji's English version of the work, based on both the verbal recordings and written notes of his lectures for the benefit of all.

We at Malini are extremely gratified for being allowed the privilege of making available to our readers the nectar of Swamiji's knowledge contained in the first chapter of his English rendering of Utpaldeva's hymnal masterpiece, the Shivastotrāvalī in this issue. We have been already serializing his Hindi translation and commentary and with the English translation too appearing now, we hope readers not well acquainted with Hindi will be able to savour the beauty of Utpala's devotional verses through the revelations of Swamiji's ecstatic renderings.

The readers will note how beautifully Utpala resolves the seeming conflict between knowledge and love as ways to attain liberation. They will find the architect of the Shaiva metaphysics of $pratyabhij\tilde{n}\bar{a}$ or re-cognition asserting the domination of devotional love over gnostic approach to the realization of the Ultimate Reality and at the same time integrating the two by defining love as absorption in undifferentiated and undivided consciousness. He rejects the otherness of Shiva by perceiving Shiva as All — the manifested world as well as the reality transcending it — and so he discards everything that is not Shiva, focusing on nothing but the complete oneness of identity with him through love. The question he raises is whether it is possible to establish an intimate and emotional relationship with a non-personal entity and answers it in his own unique way by reconciling the perception of God as a person and God as an ineffable, all-pervading principle.

kavargādisu māheśvaryāh paśumātarah //

In the world of letters, words and sentences, the eight energies of the Lord, who are the mothers of beasts (take control and hold him),

In this sūtra, the word kavargādiṣu refers to the world of letters, words and sentences. First, there are letters, then words, and then sentences. Letters create words and words create sentences. In the world of these three, the eight energies of Lord Śiva (māheśvaryādyāḥ)-who are the mothers or rulers of beasts (paśumātaraḥ) mothers of beasts. Who is the beast? The ignorant human being. What is the function of these eight mothers? The first five energies are the five senses: hearing (śabda), touch (sparśa), seeing (rūpa), taste (rasa) and smell (gandha). Then there are the three energies of mind (manas), intellect (buddhi) and limited ego (ahamkāra). These eight mothers: the five senses, along with mind, intellect and limited ego take you away from your reality of consciousness. This is the objective field upon which the eight ladies govern those who are ignorant.

Kṣemarājā, in his commentary, says that the words adiṣtḥātryo bhavanti, which mean "they take charge of holding them," must be added to this sūtra.

Now Kṣemarājā offers the following references from the Tantras to explain how the supreme energy of Lord Śiva, svātantrya śakti, seems to have descended to the level of the ignorant being. Actually, this supreme energy has not fallen at all but, for the ignorant, it seems as though it has.

This svātantrya śakti, the supreme energy of absolute independence, is always one with the creator of the universe, Lord Śiva. (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.5)

When Lord Śiva desires to manifest himself in this world, then svātantrya śakti is transformed into the energy of will (iccha śakti). (Mālini vijaya Tantra 3.6)

O dear Devi, I will explain to you how that energy which is one with Lord Śiva, although she is only one taking many formations, becomes many. (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.6)

When that energy of will (icchāśakti) perceives that this is what is truly to be desired, then that energy of will is transformed into the energy of knowledge (jñānaśakti). (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.7)

When the energy of will perceives that this is to be desired and this is not to be desired, which means she distinguishes between what is to be desired and what is not to be desired, then for him the energy of will is transformed into the energy of knowledge (jñānaśakti).

And so, when that energy of knowledge actually wants this desire to be fulfilled, then that energy of knowledge becomes the energy of action (kriyā śakti). (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.8)

This energy of will, which is the supreme energy of absolute independence of Lord Śiva (svātantrya śakti), is just like the cintāmaṇi stone, for although she has become two as the energy of knowledge and the energy of action, yet because of objective perception, whatever object he desires, she becomes like that and becoming one with that object, she becomes many. (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.9)

The first formation she takes is mātṛikā cakra, the wheel of the class of letters from "a" to "kṣa." And this garland of letters has become twofold, ninefold and fiftyfold. (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.10)

There are two classes in the garland of letters: one is the class of vowels and the second is the class of consonants. The letters from "a" to "h" (visaraga) are the vowels and that is the germ (bīja). The letters from" ka" to "ksa" are the consonants and that is the womb (yoni), the basis from which this bīja is expanded. When this class is explained as nine-fold, because of the nine vargas,2 then the first class is from the letter "a"to "h" (visaraga). The second class is "ka" varga. The third class is "ca" varga. The fourth class is "ta" varga. The fifth class is "ta" varga, the sixth is "pa" varga, the seventh is "ya" varga, the eighth is "sa" varga, and the ninth is "kṣa" varga. The fifty-fold class comprises all the separate letters from "a" to "kṣa." All these classes, the fifty-fold class, the nine-fold class and the two-fold class of the garland of letters, are adopted by svātantrya śakti. (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.11)

^{1.} The cintamani stone is a particular jewel that assumes the form of whatever is kept under it.

This germ is Lord Śiva himself and the basis of this germ (yoni) is his energy of svātantrya śakti. These eight vargas are governed by the eight great mothers who command ignorant beings (paśus). (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.12)

When each letter is taken separately, then there are fifty-fold letters.. These fifty letters correspond to the fifty rūdras. And by combining them and the objective field, they become one hundred rūdras. (Mālinī Vijaya Tantra 3.13)

By the explanation given in the Mālinī Vijaya Tantra, you will understand that when the supreme energy of Lord Śiva (pārameśvarī), which is supreme transcendental speech (parāvāk), descends to the field of the universe, she first becomes will, then knowledge and then action. Then she assumes the form of the vowels (bija), the consonants (yoni), then the classes of letters (varga), and the holders of the classes. These are Śiva, his energy and the eight great mothers.

There are two ways to observe this garland of letters as savikalpa or as nirvikalpa. The Sanskrit word savikalpa means "with varieties of thoughts" and nirvikalpa means "without varieties of thoughts."

The nirvikalpa way of observing sounds, letters and sentences is experienced by yogīs. For example, if you say, "Get me a bucket of water, I want a bucket of water," then when you examine this statement in a nirvikalpa way, you won't get that bucket of water. Rather, you will observe this is only the flow of consciousness in its own nature. The word "get" will have no meaning. It is only the

^{2.} A 'varga' is a division or class. Here, 'varga' refers to the classes of letters that comprise the Sanskrit alphabet. In Sanskrit, the vowels are one class of letters. There are eight classes of consonants which are defined by where the letter is created

^{3.} Parāvāk is known as transcendental speech because it is speech not uttered through the lips, or through the mind, or through any other medium. This speech is automatic. Parāvāk is another name for that perfect independence (svātantryam). It is soundless sound that resides in your own universal consciousness. It is the supreme sound that has no sound, the life of the other three kinds of speech that comprise the kingdom of speech paśyantī, madhyamā. and vaikharī.

letters "g", "e", "t" and nothing else. There is no meaning in the separate letters. To derive meaning, you have to attach your individual consciousness. When individual consciousness is not attached to these letters, words and sentences, then you will become one with Lord Śiva. This is the nirvikalpa reality of realization.

The savikalpa manner of observing these sounds is said to be existing when, in response to the request, "Get me a bucket of water," you actually go and fetch a bucket of water. This kind of observation is meant for ignorant beings. For those ignorant people, those beasts, these letters, words and sentences pierce their minds and make them weep, make than smile, make them laugh, make them joyous, make them happy and make them sad.

For example, when you hear the words "your father is dead," then, because you are a limited being (paśu), you begin to weep. But what is contained in these words "your father is dead"? You hear "your" which are the letters "y", "o", "u", "r" and nothing else, and you hear "father" which are the letters "f", "a", "t", "h", "e", "r" and nothing else. What meaning has come out from these sounds? Nothing, it is all divine. This is the nirvikalpa way of understanding. With this understanding, you won't weep. But ignorant limited beings, who observe in the savikalpa way, are pierced through their senses and their minds.

They are governed by the eight mothers who are the mothers of beasts and who create in their minds sometimes wonder, sometimes joy, sometimes fear, sometimes attachment, sometimes detachment all the things that happen in this universe in the realm of ignorance. And when they understand in this limited way, then that which is never limited by these letters, words and sentences, which is (nirvikalpa), always free and filled with consciousness, is covered by these energies and they become the object and are played by this limited way of being.

The Timirodghāta Tantra also says the same thing:

In the center of brahmarandhra⁴ is situated the supreme energy of Lord Śiva, the Divine Mother. surrounded by the eight divine mothers of beasts. In their hands, they hold the noose (brahma pāśa) which entangles and bind, one with limitation, keeping one from the unlimited state. These supreme terrible (mahāghrā) śaktis, create disturbance and ignorance again and again, and are very difficult to conquer.

This topic has already been referred to in the fourth sūtra of the First Awakening which says, "The Universal Mother commands this triple knowledge." There "this mother" (mātrikā) who governs all differentiated knowledge is explained in a general way. But here, in this eighteenth sutra, she is clarified in a particular way. Here, we are told that if, through negligence, the yogi who has already perceived his own nature allows his awareness to ebb, then he becomes the object of those mothers of beasts (paśumātaraḥ). By the penetration of the sounds of letters, words and sentences, he is oppressed with the delusion (moha) created by those who rule limited beings (paśus). This is the essence of this sūtra.

^{4.} The brahmarandhra is a subtle opening in the crown of head. Through this subtle opening, the kundalini departs from the entanglements of this body.

Now the author explains that a yogi must remain fully aware in each and every state of life so that this state of pure knowledge of consciousness remains stable and does not decline.

trișu caturtham tailavadāsecyam //

The fourth state (turya) must be expanded like oil so that it pervades the other three: waking, dreaming, and deep sleep.

What are the three states? The three states are the waking state (jāgrat), the dreaming state (svapna), and the state of deep sleep (suṣupti). The fourth state (turya), which is filled with pure knowledge, pure light and the ecstasy and joy of turya, must be sprinkled and expanded just as oil expands when it is poured on a smooth surface like a piece of cloth. For just as oil spreads on this surface, adhering to it, so in this way a yogi must expand the state of turyā into the other three states.

The state of turyā is found in all these three at the moment of entry and at the moment of exit. So at the time of entering into the state of wakefulness, or the dreaming state, or the dreamless state, and at the time of coming out from anyone of these three states, the yogī finds turyā existing.

The yogī must prolong turyā in such a way that its nectar becomes established and pervades not only in the beginning and the end but also in the middle of these three states. And the means to accomplishing this in all three states is to "hold it." Hold it at the time of entry and hold it at the time of exit. This nectar of turya (turyārasa) must be properly held with full awareness so that it is expanded in the center of these three states. Accomplishing this, the yogi becomes one with that nectar of turyā in an three states.

The present sūtra is also explained in the seventh sūtra of the First Awakening, which states, "Such a heroic yogi experiences the expansive state of turyā in the differentiated states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep." This sūtra explains that turya is already found in the states of waking, dreaming, and deep sleep. In addition, the eleventh sūtra of the First Awakening is very similar. This sūtra states, "The one who enjoys the oneness of the three statesw aking, dreaming and deep sleep in turyā becomes the master of all organic energies." In this sūtra, it is explained that by utilizing śāmbhavopāya with force (hathapākayuktyā) jāgrat, svapna, and susupti subside and are melted in turya.

In the present sūtra of the Third Awakening, however, we are told that the three states jagrat, svapna, and suṣupti, along with turyā are like a sword and its sheath. Here, the three states are said to be found in the sheath of turyā. And although the three states are separated from turyā, as a sword is separated from its sheath, they are united with each other. In the same manner, the yogī must be aware that jāgrat, svapna and suṣupti are found as one with turyā. This is the difference between these three sūtras. So these sūtras are not a repetition.

Now he indicates the means for attaining this end:

magnah acittena praviset //

The yogi who is merged in his self must enter completely with his mind filled with great awareness.

When he establishes and resides in the awareness of his God-consciousness in the waking state (jāgrat), the dreaming state (svapna), and in the state of deep sleep (suspti), then the gross movement of his breath enters into the subtle movement of breath and the subtle movement of breath enters into that which is supreme, where he experiences the supreme motion (spanda) in his own nature. (Netra Tantra 8.12).

Here, the author Kṣemarāja begins his commentary by saying:

... then you should enter with your mind fully aware of your God-consciousness.

In the Mṛityujit Bhaṭṭāraka Śāstra, which is part of the Netra Tantra, this is explained by Lord Śiva to Pārvatī in this way:

Set aside the gross means such as the holding of breath, concentration and contemplation, and by means of the thoughtless process, maintain one-pointed thought merged in the self (svacitta). And when his mind is merged in his own nature, then one must gain entry by that introverted knowledge (antarmukha samvedanena) where he finds the ecstasy (camatkāra) of internal awareness (vimarśa). This means one must be absorbed in and become one with that.

But how is this achieved? by becoming merged in his being. What is the meaning of "being merged"? When you have developed Inness on the body of wakefulness, on the body of dreaming and on the body of deep sleep, which means you have developed Inness on the gross body, Inness on prāṇa, and Inness on puryāṣṭaka, then that Inness is to be merged in the nectar of the ecstasy of consciousness (citta camatkāra) This is the meaning of "becoming merged in that."

This was said earlier in the Svacchanda Tantra:

Keeping the activity of the mind apart, one must unite that activity in Godconsciousness. Then this bound limited being (paśu) will realize the state of Śiva and be liberated (muktaḥ). Thereupon, he is beyond the ocean of repeated births and deaths. (Svacchanda Tantra 4.437)

This is also said in the Vijñānabhairava:

When mind (mānasam), individual consciousness (cetanā), the energy of breathing (śaktiḥ), and ego (ātmā), disappear, then that formation of Bhairava is found existing there. (Vijnānabhairava 138)

This very point is explained in the Jñānagarbha Stotra:

"O Mother. when, in ordinary daily life one repels the actions of the mind and shatters dependence on the senses, by which one is enslaved, causing one to follow them according to their every wish, and instead diverts his senses towards God-consciousness, then by your grace he instantly achieves that supreme state of God-consciousness, which floods him with the unparalleled nectar of bliss (ānanda)."

This is what is said by our great masters.

Now, for the one who is established in that supreme state of God-consciousness, there is no mind, no breath, no thoughts, no senses. For him, nothing else exists, only God-consciousness pervades everywhere. After a period of time, this yogī automatically comes out from the state of samādhi. So what happens to him when he comes out? This is explained in this next sūtra.

prāṇasamācāre samadarśanam //

When his breath begins to slowly move out toward the external state, then he also experiences the pervasion of God-consciousness there.

When his breath slowly begins to move out to external samādhi, then he experiences that God- consciousness is also existing there, in the external world. He does not experience any difference between the waking state and turya or the dreaming state and turya or between the state of deep sleep and turya. For him, these three states are filled with the state of turyā.

Filled with the fragrance of the supreme glittering (sphurana) of God-consciousness, that yogī, slowly coming out from samādhi, feels his breath is filled with a supreme fragrance. And although his breath is moving out, he feels his breath is not moving out. He feels his breath is established in his supreme being. Then after exhaling very slowly, he experiences that the three states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep are filled with the dense nectar of God-consciousness and he comes out in the waking state with this fragrance. He is a king of yogis. He never loses the fragrance of God-consciousness. This means that his God-consciousness endures in each and every state of his life, whether it be waking, dreaming, or deep sleep.

This has already been explained in Ānanda Bhairavra Śāstra:

When he has brought the daily active routine of his life to an end and holds the monistic state which bestows final liberation, then he is one with each and every deity. All castes (varṇa) and positions in life (āśrama), whether it be brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or sūdra, are equal to him. He does not discern any difference between what is to be eaten and what is not to be eaten, or what is forbidden and what is accepted. He is liberated (muktah), totally freed from all the various kinds of bondage of daily life.

In Pratyabhijiñā, Utpaladeva has also explained:

Although these great yogis come out in the waking, dreaming, and deep sleep states, working and performing all actions, they do not have any limitation of owning and disowning, pure and impure, good and bad. These limitations have ended for them. These yogis attain that supreme universal Godconsciousness.

But on the contrary, the yogi who cannot hold the nectar of turyā in the waking, dreaming, and deep sleep states, as explained in the previous sūtra, remains and becomes satisfied in that nectar of turyā (turyārasa), which he experiences only during entry and exit of any of the three states. And, even though he experiences this nectar while entering and exiting these three states, he does not experience it in the midst of wakefulness, dreaming, or dreamless deep sleep. For the one who is like that:

3.23 madhye 'varaprasavaḥ//

He does not experience the state of God-consciousness in the center of these three states.

He only experiences the state of God-consciousness in the beginning and in the end of these three states of waking, dreaming, and deep sleep.

Though he experiences and enjoys the nectar of supreme God-consciousness in the beginning and the end of these three states, what happens to him in the center, when he is in the midst of any of these states? In the center, he flows out but not in the supreme way. That is, he experiences in wakefulness, in dreaming and in deep sleep just as we do. It is only in the beginning and in the end of these states that he is filled with God-consciousness. In the center he is just like us.

But you must not conclude that "although he is established in God-consciousness in samādhi, not being able to maintain awareness, after a few minutes he enters into the dreaming state, "he is away from God-consciousness."

He holds God-consciousness in the beginning and in the end, but he is incapable of holding God-consciousness in the center of these three states. So, he is not always covered with illusion. He is only covered with illusion in the middle of these three states.

About this, the Mālinī Vijaya Tantra says:

Due to the impressions he has of what others think of him or expect from him and of his wanting to help others, to satisfy them with boons, he may lose his temper and become careless and uneven-minded, blocking his flow of God-consciousness from the center of the three states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep. So, although he is aware of God-consciousness in the beginning and in the end, he is played by this universe in the center, played by hunger, played by thirst, played by every aspect of daily life. Therefore, the one who desires to achieve the highest being should not be attached to these outer impressions. (Mālinīvijaya Tantra)

These impressions are keeping him from the center. If he does not have these thoughts, then his God-consciousness will flow throughout: in the beginning, in the end and in the center. This has already been explained in previous sūtras.

Previously, it was explained that some yogis experience this inferior generation of the self where they experience the nature of the self only in turyā and not in the other three states. Now the next sūtra explains what happens to that yogī when, even though the inferior generation (avaraḥ prasavaḥ) of his self has taken place, he again sprinkles the blissful nectar of turyā in the other three states.

3.24 mātrāsvapratyayasamdhāne naṣṭasya punarūitthānam//

When a yogī, in coming out from samādhi, also attempts to maintain awareness of Godconsciousness in the objective world, then, even though his real nature of self is destroyed by the inferior generation of selfconsciousness, he again rises in that supreme nature of the self.

The expression from the sūtra, "When a yogī also attempts to maintain awareness of God consciousness in the objective world . . . " is explained in the following two references:

Supreme God-consciousness should be sought with great effort in whatever is seen by the eyes, whatever is felt by speech, whatever is thought by the mind, whatever is perceived by the intellect, whatever is owned by limited ego, whatever is existing in the objective world, and whatever is not existing in the objective world. (Svacchanda Tantra 12.163-64)

It is explained in the Svacchanda Tantra that when a yogī, whose God-consciousness was totally destroyed by the inferior means used to generate that God-consciousness, which means that his nature was snatched away by an inferior type of trance meditates thinking, "This whole universe is one with myself," and perceives the fullness of God-consciousness in each and every object, then again he rises in his own nature. In other words, in this way, this yogī, whose nature was removed, again becomes one with the glory of God-consciousness.

Again, in the Svacchanda Tantra, it is said:

Due to God's energy of māyā. the minds of yogis are diverted by force towards worldly pleasures and away from Godconsciousness. But, in those masses of yogis, there exists some great yogi who is fully aware of his self. His state of God-consciousness is fully established and totally complete and his mind is never diverted toward worldly pleasures. (Svacchanda Tantra 4.311-12) Another thing that happens to this yogī:

Whenever the mind flows out, he centers his consciousness on that one God-consciousness. Because he feels the oneness of Śiva existing everywhere, if his mind moves here and there, even then it does not move at all because it moves in his own nature. Wherever he feels and experiences the existence of the objective world, he feels and experiences that the objective world is actually nothing but Śiva. (Svacchanda Tantra 4.313-14)

Therefore, when a yogī has attained the supreme intensity of God-consciousness:

śivatulyo jāyate //
He becomes just like Śiva.

This yogī does not becomes one with Śiva, he becomes just like Śiva. Through the intensity of meditating on turyā, this yogi has realized and achieved the state of turyāitīta. He becomes like Lord Śiva who is completely filled with pure independent consciousness and independent bliss.

He becomes like Lord Śiva. Why is it said that he becomes like Lord Śiva? Why not say that he becomes one with Śiva? It cannot be said he becomes one with Śiva because he has a body, a physical frame. As long as his physical frame is existing, he is just like Śiva, he is not one with Siva. His having a physical frame will divert him toward inferior states. For instance, he may cough, have headaches, experience muscle pain, stomach aches, ulcers, or fever. Siva does not have these ailments or suffer these physical discomforts. So, as long as the yogī possesses a body, he can only be like Siva, not one with Siva. When he casts off this physical frame composed of the five elements, then he becomes one with Siva.

In Śrī Kalikākrama Śāstra, it is said:

So, without harboring the slightest doubt, you should learn from the mouth of your master this practical yoga for entering into God-consciousness everywhere. You must consider his every word to he douhtless and true. Also, you should try to experience that state of God-consciousness until you become one with that state, Lord Śiva himself has said this, so it is absolutely true. (Śrī Kalikākrama Śāstra)

Because his physical body is existing, even when he becomes like Śiva, that action (karma) that has brought his body into existence is ended by enjoying that action, not by casting it aside. Prārabdha karma cannot be overcome unless it is enjoyed. For an embodied being, prārabdha karma is unavoidable. He may be just like Śiva or he may be an ordinary person; prārabdha karma must be overcome by being enjoyed. It cannot be cast aside or abandoned.

So, for the remainder of his life, he must continue to exist with this physical frame. He must welcome whatever comes to him, whether it be good or bad. Whatever he gets to eat, he must eat. It is not worthwhile to cast his body aside. For such a yogi, this body is to be maintained until the time of death.

This he explains in the next verse.

THEORIES OF TRUTH AND KNOWLEDGE with special reference to

KASHMIR SHAIVISM AND KASHMIRI SUFISM-1

Dr. Navjivan Rastogi

[This paper was presented as the Key Note Address at the National Seminar organized by the Department of Sanskrit, University of Kashmir at Srinagar on Oct. 28-31, 2007. We are grateful to the author for giving the permission to reproduce it.]

यस्मिनसर्व यतः सर्व यः सर्वतश्च यः। यश्च सर्वमयो नित्यं तस्मै सर्वात्मने नमः

Before I come to the main theme I would like to dedicate this lecture to the vibrant intellectual and cultural legacy of Kashmir by paying homage to Abhinavagupta whose chosen land of birth was Kashmir as Śiva-incarnate; to Lalla Ded who proved to be a catalyst in transmitting Saiva spirituality to the Rishi lineage; to Shaikh Nur-ud-Din, more popularly known as Nund Rishi, who founded the Rishi Order; to Shri Lakshman Joo, who became a contemporary symbol of Kashmir Shaivism and whose birth centenary we are celebrating this year; and last, but not the least, to Dr. B.N. Pandit who left us midway a few days back on September 7, having immortalized himself by his monumental contribution in the form of Encyclopedia of Kashmir Shaivism. Had he been alive, he would be very happy to see this seminar being organized in Srinagar, which term, if we go by the recorded testimony, happens to be an a b b r e v i a t i o n f o r Śrīvidyānagar². Śrīvidyā as we know is a sister stream of Kashmir Shaivism.

At the very outset one is bound to get a feel of the challenging enormity and vastness of the seminar's theme. I am afraid such a lecture can hardly be expected to do full justice with the subject both for reasons of time and for reasons of competence, as my personal exposure to Sufi thought of Kashmir is miserably meagre. Professors Rizvi3 and Rafiqui4 tell us that the cross fertilization of Sufi beliefs with those enunciated by Lalla led to the establishment of the Rishi order of Sufis in Kashmir. Shaikh Nuru'd-Din (1378-1439), the greatest sage of his time as per Jonarāja, the author of the second Rājataranginī, was inspired by Lalla, the great Saivite mystic. To the Shaikh the Islamic profession of faith was incomplete without sincere acknowledgement of the reality of the self. Reminding us of the values fostered by Rumi, the Rishi order subscribed to peaceful coexistence with the whole mankind. It is therefore not surprising, as Prof. Ashraf Wani notes, for the later Sufis of Kashmir to start believing Lalla as one of the greatest women Sufis of Islam⁵.

Way back in 1936 it was Gopinath Kaviraj who in his landmark article entitled "Kaśmīrīya Śaiva Darsana" drew the attention of the academic world for the first time to the ideological kinship between Sufism and Kashmir Saivism.6 Wrote he that though Von Kremer, Dozy, Sacy (Sylvestre de Sacy) and even Goethe were convinced of Sufism's indebtedness to Advaita Vedānta and Nicholson, Gibbs etc., demonstrated its greater resemblance with Neo-Platonism, he believed Sufi's closeness, both in respect of ideology and praxies, to Pratyabhijñā and Tripurā, the two constitutive currents of Kashmir Shaivism and Bengal Vaishnavism, was striking. This affinity was evident, according to him, broadly with regard to the three Sufi doctrines viz.,

1.: The Ultimate Reality is essentially identical with self-conscious will and the world is its limited emanation (परिच्छिन विकास). For the attainment of Godhead, action — not knowledge - is the primary tool;

2. : The Ultimate Reality is one and is of the nature of Eternal Beauty. The world is like a mirror wherein the Timeless Beautiful sees His own face. The World is thus a reflection, neither modification nor transformation. In beauty's self-revealing lies the source of world creation. Such a reckoning provides a fertile ground for enunciating the doctrine of love;

3.: The Ultimate Reality is nothing but knowledge i.e., gnosis or luminosity. It is essentially one and Islam in Kashmir (Fourteenth to Sixteenth Century), Muhammad Ashraf Wani, Oriental Publishing House, Srinagar, 2004, p.p. 93-94. Prof. Wani's work is invaluable in so far as it musters galaxy of sources, untouched hitherto. His penetration into Sanskrit sources is expansive and commendable. His methodology, however, though intended to be scientific, objective and integral, reflects an innate cultural bias which he has not been able to overcome in some of his vital deductions. Had he cared to delve into "spirit" of the Sanskrit sources, with the total historico-cultural contextualization, instead of stopping short at the 'letter' thereof, his contribution would have been immensely more valuable. It, none-the-less, remains masterpiece for its width and coverage.

homogeneous, yet has the seeds of phenomenal differentiation latent within.

Kaviraj in his somewhat elaborate analysis visualizes in these ideas a deep affinity with the notion of transcendental relishing of the perfect I-hood (पूर्णीहन्ताचमत्कार) and also a marked parallelism with the three instrumentalities of redemptive knowledge, e.g., Śāmbhava, Śākta and Aṇava as propounded in Kashmir Śaivism⁷.

Let us now move to Kashmir Shaivism. Kashmir Shaivism. Kashmir Shaivism, Kaviraj ji used to say, represents an extremely rare ancient wealth of the Indian thought-empire and offers itself as a profound example of theistic monism. The non-duality as visualized in the Kashmir Shaivism is a sort of integral totality and in this it replicates, tantrico philosophically, Vedic integralism (pūrņatāvāda). The totalistic vision of Kashmir Saivism is the tantric transfiguration of the Vedic integralism. Visualizing an uninterrupted continuity between the manifest form and the formless unmanifest is what constitutes the foundation of the Vedic integralism.9 What distinguishes Indian tradition from other religious and philosophical world-views in the world is its spirituality immanent as their essence in the culture and philosophy. Essence of spiritual pursuit lies in internalizing selfconsciousness reflected in the flux of experiences, discovering the subject, the self, without getting lost into mental constructs and objects thereof. Its realization constitutes knowledge in the primary sense. Will, knowledge and action constitute three steps by which consciousness expresses its creativity. This 'will' (icchā) is in itself simply an outflow of bliss (ānanda), which is what defines consciousness. Thus the whole process of selfrecognizing, self-expressing and self-affirming is essentially creative. Due to the voluntaristic emphasis of such a magnitude Kashmir Saivism stands out in a class of its own separate from other gnostic systems such as Buddhism, Sāmkhya and Vedānta. As a consequence, tantric sādhanā or praxies too does not limit itself to the quest of detached witnessing consciousness (cp. sākși in Sāmkhya and Vedānta) alone but seems to integrate itself with the rhythm of the universal mind, because it is within the supreme ideality that witnessing has any meaning. It is within the fold

It may however be remembered that Kaviraj's remarks were made with reference to Sufism in general and not Kashmir Sufism in particular, yet their pertinence in the present context cannot be underestimated. It may also be worthwhile to point out that these observations came after the similarities between Sufi faith and Sahajiā cult of Mahāyāna Siddha tradition as well as Siddhas of the Nath cult (akin to anupanya and Kula matā in Kashmir Shaivism respecetively) had already come to the notice.

of the absolute spirit that apperceiving and creating (prakāśa and vimarśa, Śiva and Śakti) are the moments of that indivisible reality. The aim of human aspiration is not the attainment of the fulcrum of pure subjectivity or Iness, it is also realization of that divinity which constitutes inner source of its being 10. On this point of view the world is not devalued, nor denounced, nor renounced, for in all imperfections of this life the absolute perfection alone shines through. Thus consciousness remains immanent in countless worlds it creates in the course of self- discovery and at the same time transcends them, being their creator. It is what is described by Whitehead as 'cosmological' function of philosophy and is sung by the great poet of the East, Allama Iqbal, in his famous couplet:

आपको, आप ही गोया मुसाफ़िर आप ही मंज़िल हूँ मैं।

This philosophical exegesis foregrounds the Pratyabhijñā theory of knowledge as well as reality. To me truth is a value concept, hence it belongs more to the realm of axiology, whereas reality has more direct bearing on out discussion at issue. Pratyabhijñā, "recognition" in English, represents all the monistic streams of Saiva thought of Kashmir, notwithstanding their internal micro distinctions. The advent of Pratyabhijñā school marks the emergence of authentic epistemology of Kashmir Shaivism. Jayaratha venerates the philosophers of this school from Somananda to Abhinavagupta as "rationalists and logicians" (तर्कस्य कर्तारः व्याख्यातारश्च). 11 Indeed such was the intention of Utpala the first propagator of the system. The "novelty" of Pratyabhijñā as professed by him (इति प्रकटितो मया सुघट एषः मार्गो नवो¹² not only aimed at developing a full-fledged dialectics but also evolving Pratyabhijñā, not as a school, but as a universal criterion or over-arching paradigm of knowing, reasoning and expenence.

There were several challenges before the Saivists. However the predominant challenge came from the Buddhist sceptics. The only way to engage them, as was indeed done by almost all the pre-Navya-nyāya orthodox systems, was to deny the transient attribute (dharma) and affirm the substantive (dharmin), the enduring datum, instead and thus negate the very foundation of scepticism. However the Saivists chose a different method which instead of being rationalistic and logical involved a kind of inner structuring. This was subjecting the central myth of descending of Siva as phenomenal world and ascending of the world as Siva through the dynamism of Sakti to exegeting the same in terms of the selfrecognitive process. Their next priority was to discover the essential nature of the self as constituting the central foundation of the internally structured reciprocity underlying the diverse concepts. This explains as to why the Saivists took recourse to such concepts as pūrņatā and sāmarasya (perfection/totality and harmony) to account for their brand of non-dualism. This gave rise to a subchallenge prompting them to provide a constitutive modal to this integral structuring whereby subordinate and underpervading substructures might evolve in such a fashion as retains their individuality and that individuality flows from their constant participation in the higher and more pervasive scheme of the dynamic reality. There could not be a better framework than that of pratyabhijñā to actualize this.

We are not therefore surprised when we see Saivas reverse the normal tide of Indian philosophy in their attitude towards pratyabhijñā. All the systems of Indian philosophy, barring Jainas who take pratyabhijnā as an independent means of knowledge, subsume it under either other means of knowledge or in some kind of cognitive mode. But for Saivas, on the contrary, pratyabhijñā is found inherent in all the sources of cognition,12 for it not only marks the natural disposition of all cognitions but defines the intrinsic function of pramāņa as well. Abhinavagupta categorically states ''यावन्ति हि आत्मज्ञानशास्त्राणि श्रुत्यन्तसिद्धान्तरहस्यतन्त्ररूपाणि, तानि आत्मनि नैव सिद्धिमपूर्वरूपां

रचयन्ति। तस्मात् व्यवहार मात्र साधनफलानि एव तानीति भावः।14 Accordingly, the reality, being identical with the a priori subjective ideality, is beyond denial or affirmation, disproving or proving, by any means of cognition. Hence the role of pramāņa gets restricted to discharging its conventional role in accounting for our world of transactions (vyavahārasādhana), that is, removing stupor, delusion, dirt obscuring the object at the time of cognizing it.14 What must not be missed is that even in conventional avatar the spirit of conventional source of knowledge (व्यवहारसाधन) remains transcendental. Nature of reality, consisting as it does of prakāśa and vimarsa, extends to the arena of cognition too. Pramāņa is identified with extroverted vimarśa which is nothing but the act of making manifest by removing tamas, delusion or darkness17 This has farreaching implications in the sense that prakāśa, which stands for the objective reality and has vimarsa for its essence, is viewed as lucidity or absence of impurity (svacchatā, nirmalatā) on the one hand, and vimarsa whose characteristic function consists in removing impurity or dirt-covering on the other, then it logically paves the way for innate oneness between prakāśa and vimarśa.18 In our general perception the identification of the "appearing" (bhāsamāna) with the "appeared" (bhāta) is recognition. This takes place only when there is disruption in the cognitive continuity between the two moments. This disruption, gap, is what we understand by moha or vismṛti. Restoring this cognitive connectivity constitutes removal of moha. For this the Saivists use a special term anusamdhāna, "cognitive synthesizing," and employ this notion as an exclusive feature of Kashmir Shaivism that distinguishes it from the rest of Indian thought since other epistemologies are anchored on adhyavasāya, "determing"

¹³ I.P.K. 4.1.16

The Buddhists too admit rudimentary (but illusory) synthesis of verbal designation (abhilāpa)¹⁹ which impels them to view pratyabhijñā as the aprioristic generalized mode of cognition aptly described by Abhinava as विकल्पलक्षणमहासामान्ययोग²⁰. Surprisingly, Abhinavagupta agrees with Dharmakīrti in taking verbal designation as his root source also.

But in Abhinava it is not "coalescing" (samsarga) but "identity" (tādātmya). That is, abhilāpa, "verbality", which Abhinavagupta projects as pratyavamarśa (self-referring consciousness), again a term which is imported from the Buddhists in this very context, constitutes the nature of object. This pratyavamarsa is the intrinsic synthetic activity of our consciousness which is relentlessly portrayed as anusamdhāna by the Saiva logicians and which renders the fusion of two cognitions past and present (पूर्वापरज्ञानमेलन) possible, whereas the same remains an impossibility in Buddhism.

Interestingly the Buddhists began with a stringent critique of Bhartrhari and the Śaivists re-established Bhartrhari by equally rigorous counter critique of the Buddhists. Bhartrhari considers vāgrūpatā, "being of the nature of speech or word", which is abhilāpa for Buddhists, to be the innate nature of knowledge. The quintessence of this verbality is self-referring awareness called pratyavamarśa, through which it constantly grasps or perceives prakāśa, that is, object. Again the spirit of pratyavamarśa is more or less recognitive, otherwise we would fail to identity object by word or verbal designation. Abhinavagupta carries forward the legacy of Bhartrhari by enlarging its scope. In his formulation pratyabhijñā emerges as anusamdhāna in the cognitive, adhyāsa "superposition" in the linguistic and yojana, "unifying or interlinking", in the ontological contexts. Though connotatively distinct they constitute a serial hierarchy beginning with yojana and culminating in anusamdhāna.

A reference to the "commingling process" (ubhaya-melanātmtā prakriyā) in this context seems necessary. Saivists deliberately resort to this process in order to analyse the exclusive processelement in anusamhdhāna, synthesizing, understood not as identity or oneness but as fusion or blending. The blending of the presentative and representative cognitions, experience and remembrance, gives rise to recognition. This union of the two cognitions, takes place in respect of their objective content, not in that of the cognitive aspect. There appear to be two reasons for it. One, the reality as conceived in Kashmir Saivism is not simple or attributeless unity but a concrete unity, an integral whole homologizing not only the distincts but opposit as well within. This notion is realized by translating it into the unity of two cognition-episodes on the objective side while letting the individual character of the respective cognitions remain intact. This results into recognition being a case of complex psychosis rather than a simple one. Second reason is found to be inherent in the natural disposition of knowledge itself. Belief in selfl u m i n o s i t y (svayamprakāśatā) of knowledge implies that it cannot be revealed or cognized by another knowledge (ज्ञानान्तरावेद्यता) Perception and memory, both by virtue of their being specific modes of cognition are self-luminous. Hence prakāśa representing the perceptual experience can not be the object of memory, that is, vimarśa. Vimarśa happens to be the essential being, not the cognizing subject, of prakāśa. Thus their unification through reduction of one into the other cognition is not feasible, its feasibility is wrought through objective fusion or blending.19

LETTER FROM JOHN HUGHES

Dear Trustees and Devotees,

I am extremely happy that devotees in India have been receiving the nectar of knowledge from our beloved Guru Maharaj, Swami Ishwar Swaroop, in the form of the Shivastotravali in Kashmiri. These recordings were made during the 1970's at the Shaiva Institute in Gupta Ganga. As Swamiji would move to Jammu during the winter months, it is unfortunate that a number of verses remained un-translated.

For the translation of these missing verses, I am happy to announce that, in co-operation with the Ishwar Ashram Trust, Swamiji's English rendering of the Shivastotravali will be made available through the quarterly journal of Malini.

I recorded these English lectures at Ishwar Ashram from 1976 to 1978. What appears here in this issue of Malini is the transcript in Swamiji's own words, with the absolute minimum amount of editing.

After spending more than 16 years recording these lectures it was Swamiji's verbal and written wish that I publish these materials for the benefit of all mankind. It is my sincere desire, through the Universal Shaiva Fellowship and Ishwar Ashram Trust, to make all of Swamiji's teachings available to all devotees and sincere students of this wonderful teaching of Kashmir Shaivism.

I am happy to announce that the video presentation of the first six chapters of the Bhagavad Gita, the audio and transcript of Swamiji's revelation of the Vijnana Bhairava, and also the entire Shivastotravali in English will be available in the near future.

Chapter One

Bhaktivilāsākhyam prathamanı stotranı

You already know that this Śivastotrāvalī is the collection of songs by Utpaladevācārya, and is commentated upon by Abhinavagupta's disciple Kshemarāja in Sanskrit, and I have translated it in Hindi.

For them, where is not a shrine? A shrive state also he had mystical experience. He became mad after God sometimes. Sometimes he was reserved because of being Shaivite, but sometimes he turned mad because of being too much attached to Lord Shiva.

Utpaladeva was the great grand-guru of Abhinavagupta.² He was not only Shaivite but

And these songs he has sung in a boat in Kashmir. He was carried by his disciples, and they were jotting down all that he sung. And the combination of these stotras is done by some other devotee of Utpaladeva. He has sung just in chain-like form, and those [chapters] were composed afterwards by some of his devotees.⁴

Now, this is the first stotra, first shloka:

na dhyāyato na japatah syādyasyāvidhipūrvakam / evameva Śivābhāsastam numo bhaktiśālinam //1//

I bow to that devotee who is glorified with the devotion of Lord Śiva, and to whom the appearance of Lord Śiva takes place without conducting meditation or recitation of any kind. He does not recite a mantra for Lord Śiva, and he does not meditate; but without meditation, without recitation, he attains the state where he feels the oneness of Lord Śiva. I bow to that devotee.

I don't bow to that devotee who meditates and then achieves, or who recites and then achieves. That devotee is far away from that devotee who achieves Lord Śiva without doing anything.

ātmā mama bhavadbhaktisudhāpānayuvā'pi san/ lokayātrārajorāgātpalitairiva dhūsarah //2//

In fact, I am always young. By tasting the nectar of Thy devotion, I am always young. But still, in this worldly field I feel that I am old enough; but internally I am young. Externally, I appear to be old because of too much exertion in these worldly activities, but I am always young because of tasting the nectar of Thy devotion labdhatvatsampadām bhaktimatām

Although I am old because of being in contact with worldly people and worldly activities I feel that I am old, I am exhausted but, internally, labdha tvat sampadām, those who have achieved the wealth of Your devotion, and those who are truly devoted to You, and those who are residing in Thy kingdom, for them, activities in these worldly matters become one with that divinity of God-consciousness.

sākshādbhavanmaye nātha sarvasmin bhuvanāntare / kim na bhaktimatām kshetram mantrah kvaishām na siddhyati //4//

Nātha, O Lord, those people for whom this whole universe has become one with Your Godconsciousness, one with Your presence, for those people who feel Thy presence in each and every part and parcel of this worldly field, those are really Thy devotees.

For them, where is not a shrine? A shrine is also a shrine for them; but a bathroom is also a divine shrine for them; a muddy place is also a shrine for them; a clean place is also a shrine for them.

And everywhere there is the possibility to attain God-consciousness, for them. They can attain God-consciousness in this struggling state of the universe, not only in a temple. In a temple they attain God-consciousness, but in outward worldly states also they attain God consciousness; for them there is no difference.

jayanti bhaktipīyūśarasāsavavaronmadāh / advitīyā api sadā tvaddvitīyā api prabho //5//

Prabho, O Master, bhaktipīyūśa rasa āsavavara unmadāh, those persons who have become mad by taking the nectarized liquor of Thy devotion,...

(You know "the nectarized liquor of Thy devotion?" It is liquor because it maddens you, but it is "nectarized" liquor, it is filled with the nectar of God-consciousness, that liquor.)

... by tasting that liquor, those devotees are always glorified, they are always divine.

Where lies the madness in them? Advitīyā api sadā, the madness is in this respect they are mad because advitīyā, they always boast that they are the only persons glorified in this universe, and always they weep for attaining the nearness of their Master. So this is madness!

Sometimes they say, "I am divine": sometime they say, "I am nothing." So this madness they possess.

And those mad devotees of Thee are always glorified.

anantānandasindhoste nātha tattvam vidanti te / tādrishā eva ye sāndrabhaktyānandarasāplutāh //6//

Nātha, O Master, only those people experience the reality of Thy ocean of God-consciousness; only those people experience the reality, experience the position or state, real state, of Thy God consciousness; those people only, they experience.

Who?

Tādrishā eva ye sāndra bhakti ånanda, who are really soaked in the nectar of that universal Godconsciousness, in the nectar of the ocean of universal God-consciousness, those who are soaked in that.

[Question:] What is this nectar?

Amrita, ānanda, bliss, the blissful state of Godconsciousness.

And that blissful state of God- consciousness is really an ocean; and, in that ocean, those people who are soaked properly, they only can experience the reality of that ocean.

Those who are roaming on the shore of that ocean, they don't know the depth and the reality of that ocean; they only experience it superficially.

tvamevātmesha sarvasya sarvacātmani rāgavān / iti svabhāvasiddhām tvadbhaktim jñāñajayejjanah //7//

O Lord, You are the nature of everybody; in fact, You are the nature of everybody.

Sarvaścātmani rāgavān, everybody is attached in his own nature, in his own self. You like your self; you want to live; you don't want to be worried in any way and everybody does the same, individually. And that "him-self" is, in the real sense, Your nature.

[Question:] God's nature? God's nature.

So loving You is automatically achieved by everybody. Everybody loves You; because they love themselves, so they love You. So Thy devotion is acquired and achieved by everybody, every individual.

But only there is one difference jñānam jayet janah, he who knows this secret reality, he is glorified; others are not.

nātha vedyakshaye kena na driśyo'syekakah sthitah / vedyavedakasamkshobhe 'pyasi bhaktaih sudarśanah //8//

O my Master, it is a fact You are achieved when you shun all worldly activities; after shunning each and every worldly activity, You are achieved, this is a fact! You are not achieved till then, unless you shun all these outward, worldly matters.

But, if by shunning these outward worldly matters You are achieved, what greatness is in achieving this way? There is no greatness in achieving this way, achieving You this way.

Greatness lies vedya in those devotees who achieve You, who experience You, in the very action of the universe. In the very activities of daily life, [those] who experience You [there], they really know and experience You in the real sense. Vedya vedaka samkshobhe, in the agitation of vedya and vedaka, the objective and the subjective world, they experience the nature of God-consciousness; and very easily without adopting any means.

To achieve You after the adoption of means, and sādhanā, and meditation, and yoga, and everything, it is all humbug. Those who achieve You in the very action of the universe, while doing all other works, they achieve You and very easily without doing anything.

[Question:] Is this Śāmbhavopāya? Yes.

And you are fond of that Pārvatī.

But there is a problem in me.

Tadvad ekā tvad bhaktirastu me, I have adopted one woman for You to possess, and that is devotion. You should consider [that] my devotion for You is another lady my devotion, bhakti.

But my devotion is not accepted by You as much as you accept Pārvatī in nearness. My devotion remains away from Your presence. This is a problem for me.

I want my devotion also my devotion, this lady my devotion for You must remain one with You, married to You, my devotion. So, it means I want to [be] devoted [to] you in continuity, without any break, so that You embrace my devotion, You accept my devotion, You will be fond of my devotion.

[But] You have no fondness for my devotion. I devote my time for You, You ignore that. I love you, You don't care. Pārvatī loves You very little and You care for that too much. [Laughter] This is the problem.

So I want the same condition; the same condition of conduct should be adopted with this lady also.

Which lady? My devotion.

So this is the triple way of this universe. Sometimes you want to [be] devoted [to] the Lord, go to the temple or church, or anything that is the path of joy [āhlāda]. And sometimes you want to struggle for constructing a house and repairing your motorcar. This is the path of sadness [duhkha]; you are tired, exhausted there. Sometimes you want to go to bed and lie down with a heating pad on your chest, and, bas, snore for the whole time. This is the path of moha; this is the path of

It may be sluggishness, it may be sadness, it may be joy. The joyful path carries Thy devotee to that God-consciousness; the path with sadness also diverts him towards Godconsciousness; and the path with sluggishness also.

That is like sourness to me, that state of supreme knowledge of God-consciousness, without devotion.

This expansion of the universal state of life is really a creeper, is just like a creeper, grown creeper.

Āmūlāt vāk latā seyam kramam, and this vāk latā, this vine of sound parā, paśyantī, madhyamā, and vaikharī...:

(Parā is the supreme word. The supreme word is without differentiation, that is called parā, parāvāṇī. Next to that is paśyantī; next to that is madhyamā; and next to that is vaikharī.) ... these four-fold branches of this vine of sound, speech, are expanded in this universe.

Paśyantī is when you are only looking and there is no thought in your mind that is paśyantī. Parā is before that. Madhyamā is when you are looking, when you don't speak but you speak with the mind that is madhyamā. Vaikharī is that word when you speak with words also, with the lips also so this is the inferior state of sound. The inferior state of sound is vaikharī; superior to that is madhyamā; superior to that is paśyantī; and the supreme word is parā.

Sometimes you are established in parā when you are in samādhi. Sometimes you are established in paśyantī when you are about to come out from samādhi, that is the state of paśyantī. When you are only thinking in your mind and not acting with your body, that is the state of madhyamā. When you are acting with the limbs also, that is the state of vaikharī.

And this four-fold state of word, sound, is expanded in this universe.

There is one problem, one desire in me. My only desire is that this creeper should be watered with the nectar of Thy devotion, so that this creeper bears the fruit of Thy devotion. When it is watered with devotion, it will bear the fruit which has the taste of Thy devotion.

In the Vedas, in the Śiva Stotras, in all those sacred books, this is said that, "You must worship Lord Śiva after becoming Lord Śiva Himself. When you become Lord Śiva, then you are capable to worship Him."

If you have become an individual, being an individual you cannot worship that universal Being; it is out of the question. How can a limited being get contact with unlimited Being?

So you must become first unlimited yourself, and then you can worship that unlimited Being Śiva.

But Thy devotees have corrected it (this ruling, rules and regulations); they have corrected that. They have said, "bhakto bhūtvā iti kathyate, you must be devoted to Lord Śiva, then you can get contact with Him."

If you are filled with Śiva bhāva, the state of Śiva, you are not capable of worshipping Śiva. When you are devotedly devoted to Śiva, then you are capable to worship Śiva. You can worship Śiva only when you are filled with devotion.

And this is correct; this is the correct way of understanding. From my point of view, this is the correct way of understanding, because tvameva hi vapuh sāram bhaktairadvaya śodhitam, they have clarified, they have in a real sense clarified, what is right and what is wrong. They have known, they have experienced, this.

O Lord, when you are achieved, you are achieved by some particular yoga exercise, or by a particular meditation, and you are achieved when a person, a devotee, is sentenced to a cave, or some secluded corner, without the struggle of universal activities, then you are achieved, by some particular adoption of a particular yoga.

This is a deceit; in a real sense this is deceit.

To give up the world and achieve Godconsciousness. You will never achieve Godconsciousness after shunning the activities of the universe.

On the contrary, when you are situated in the universe and you are given to the universal activities, then there is the possibility of achieving the state of God-consciousness.

So it seems that this universe is not separate from the state of God-consciousness. The universe is the real manifestation of Godconsciousness, and this universe is just the reality of His nature. If you shun this reality of His nature, how can you achieve Godconsciousness?

So it is deceit; it is just deceit. When you go to a cave and shun all the activities of the universe, all your activities of daily life, and know that you will achieve God consciousness, it is deceit; you are wrong there.

Anyathā sarva kakṣyāsu bhāsi bhaktimatā, there are such devotees in this universe who are existing, and I have experienced those devotees who are existing in universal activities. The Trika Devotional Mysticism-3

The Mystical Night

The experience of union with Siva is not the end of the mystical journey precisely because of it being characterised by the sense of I-Thou relationship, which means that the dualistic way of thinking and of perceiving has not yet been totally overcome. The union that is experienced is between the individual and God, and so God would still be experienced as the "other." In order to overcome or transcend the otherness of God, the mystic has still further to travel the painful path of what is called the mystical night. The mystical night is a path that terminates in the experience of the ineffable absolute (bhairava), and in terms of which is opened up the door for entering (samāveśa) into the ocean of bliss that is the Absolute. The experience of delight is so wonderful and amazing that it finds no words for expressing its depth. The very entrance into the ocean of bliss denotes complete death to the natural man, which is equated with the undifferentiated state of being. This ineffable Siva as the Absolute is so equated with the mystical night (śivarātrī) as to be identical with "the Light of all lights, darkness of all darknesses!" 21. The ineffable and radiant light of Siva is such as would devour, through penetration, every kind of duality.

It is in the stillness and solitude of the mystical night that the soul, as it were, takes a plunge into the hidden life of the Self, and as the night progresses in the blazing glow of love, the recorrespondingly emerges, without clarity of intention, in the soul desire for such knowledge about which it knows nothing. Also the soul has no understanding as to how to have the knowledge of the un-definable Absolute. It is in the context of this urge that Utpaladeva says:

"In a way I did not know that I had not known, previously//"

As I acquired the nectar of your love, so I know now which I knew not before ²²// As a consequence of this, the inner agitation ceases to be //

There spreads calm both inwardly and outwardly //

The mystic accordingly plunges into Śiva, which is a process of interfusing of soul and Śiva //

This interfusing is occasioned because the "lover adores you perpetually, Lord, in the state of the Night of Siva when there is not the slightest sign of light, and when the entire universe is very drowsy" 23/1.

Whether the devotee is asleep or awake, he knows that he will be awakened to nonduality by the "yogic sleep" of love. It is on account of the fervour of the will that the thought in the mind remains asleep with regard to the world. As a result of this nonawareness of the world, the yogi-ascetic plunges into the repose of love that night entails. This "yogic sleep" does not only embody the non-awareness of the world, but also is seen as a means of stripping off the thoughtconstructs, and thereby allowing the soul to remain absorbed in the undifferentiated Absolute, which is Maheśvara, and which means the emergence of pure consciousness devoid of states. What it amounts to saying is that the heart must so empty itself as to be aware of nothing but of Siva alone. It is this pure loving awareness of Siva that is constitutive of authentic mystical asceticism.

In order to make the image of the "night" more meaningful, there is an another image that the Trika mystics have made use of, which is that of the "cavern." Like night, the cavern is bottomless, and so non-definable. It is an image in terms of which the mystic desires to sink deep down into the bottomless ocean, which is Śiva. This cavern, though hidden and concealed, is cognised when the brilliance of the Supreme Light causes destruction of the darkness of ignorance within and without. This is how Bhaṭṭa Nārāyaṇa gives vent to this aspect of the mystical experience:

O that we may see your interior cavern, enchanting and profound, in darkness dissipated on all side by the Brightness Supreme ²⁴//

As to why the image of "cavern" is used is because the mystic desires to explore the unexplored depths of being. It is so because it is in the darkness of the cavern of the heart where Siva resides, hidden and secret, the blind men of ignorance, who have been blinded by the ignorance of duality, have no inclination to know as to where Siva resides. In contrast to the men of ignorance, the mystic perceives Siva within the abysmal light through the mystical torch of unity. It is such a light as would consume ego that is offered as an oblation into the illuminating flames of sacrifice. It is only the "hero" (vīra) who has the courage and boldness of plunging into the cavern of the heart. He does so for the purpose of purifying the heart from the residue of latencies (vāsanās), from thoughts as well as from memory. Upon purifying the heart from active and latent drives, the mystic is so empowered to attain the naked will of the undifferentiated consciousness -- and it is this consciousness that serves as the substratum of memory, intelligence and sensibility. Once the cavern of the heart is purified of its active and latent dispositions, or what may be called latent fluids (samskāra-s), there correspondingly emerges unbounded capacity in the form of energy that is unimpeded. This emergence of energy is actualised when the interior of the cavern is illumined by the divine splendour²⁵. Accordingly the mystic has the experience of the cavern as manifesting itself as the very essence "of the cosmos."

The Night as the Symbol of Pain

It is, no doubt, through the mystical night that the mystic attains to perfect unity with Siva. However, the attainment of this unity is not so easy as to be free from thorns and thistles. The progress of the mystic towards spiritual illumination is determined measure to which his love for Siva has attained purity, which means the what extent the mystic has been able of burning in the furnace of love the latent and active residues in the mind. While the night could be sweet for the mystic who is blessed with the beatific vision, it could equally leave bitter taste in the mouth of those who only experience painful separation. There are some mystics who initially enjoy the sweet taste of the divine presence, but also experience such oppressive and painful moments when they feel deprived of this joy that was initially experienced. Utpaladeva has beautifully expressed this come-and-go type of experience thus:

"Even though the essence of your great Light is permanent and evident everywhere, Lord, why then did I venture into darkness"

despite Inc. mystic

The darkness of the night, when looked at from the epistemic point of view, denotes ignorance. When ignorance is spoken of, it does not denote absence of knowledge. Ignorance within the Trika framework denotes imperfect knowledge (apūrņa-khyāti), which means that it is knowledge that is basically erroneous concerning the nature of the Absolute. For the Trika mystic the erroneous knowledge is that which is characterised by dualistic thinking and in terms of which is experienced an unbridgeable gap between the individual being and God. Ignorance, thus, would basically mean deprivation of such knowledge as is constitutive of undifferentiated unity. But darkness, when looked at from the perspective of feeling, symbolises bitterness of the heart. It is so because the density of darkness is such that one is deprived of the illuminative presence of the Lord. Or it could also mean such separation as is oppressive and painful. Thus for a mystic there is no greater pain than to experience separation from the Beloved. Accordingly pain for a mystic is separation, whereas joy is nothing but perfect union 27. Thus the mystic, due to this separation, feels wounded in the heart. And the wounds of separation are inflicted upon the heart on account of the fact that the mystic seems to have lost the direction on the way to divine unity. Thus cries the mystic prayerfully:

When will your essence,
Lord, which reveals itself at the precise instant when one contemplates upon it, fill forever with the wave of its supreme ambrosia, the gaping wounds made by (my) ignorance of the true
liberation ²⁸//

Such devotees who have experienced the ecstasy of love know the extent of pain that separation from the Beloved causes. Thus for such mystics the torment of the darkness of the night becomes the breeding-ground for meaning, because it is they who alone enjoy,

It is so because the density of darkness is such that one is deprived of the illuminative presence of the Lord. Or it could also mean such separation as is oppressive and painful. Thus for a mystic there is no greater pain than to experience separation from the Beloved. Accordingly pain for a mystic is separation, whereas joy is nothing but perfect union 27. Thus the mystic, due to this separation, feels wounded in the heart. And the wounds of separation are inflicted upon the heart on account of the fact that the mystic seems to have lost the direction on the way to divine unity. Thus cries the mystic prayerfully:

When will your essence,
Lord, which reveals itself at the precise instant when one contemplates upon it, fill forever with the wave of its supreme ambrosia, the gaping
wounds made by (my)
ignorance of the true
liberation ²⁸//

Such devotees who have experienced the ecstasy of love know the extent of pain that separation from the Beloved causes. Thus for such mystics the torment of the darkness of the night becomes the breeding-ground for meaning, because it is they who alone enjoy, love that somehow attracts the devotee. Thus the devotee always and constant!y implores God for the fall of such loving grace as would cause the destruction of darkness, and thereby of transmigratory existence 33. For the devotee mere knowledge does not seem to have the capacity of penetrating the dark cavern of ignorance unless it is transformed into the flame of love. It is the flame of love that alone has the power of devouring the transmigratory existence by purifying the heart of its impurity. As the flames of fire purify gold from the accrued impurities, so does the loving flame destroy such impurities that are the cause of phenomenal becoming. Since the taste of love for the devotee is sweet, so the so-called gnostic illumination seems to him only a sour liquid 34.

The role of love in the life of a devotee is such as would, upon its attainment, terminate in the stabilization of the path of illumination. It is on account of love that both the dispositions of quietude and intensity are so activated in the devotee as would result in the initiation of such a movement that is necessary for the realisation of illumination. Thus Utpaladeva declares:

"Even your essence may be inconceivable, (which means) beyond (the sphere) of contemplation, (yet) it discloses itself to such (devotees) who love you as soon they begin to contemplate" 35//

These words of Utpaladeva make it clear that the devotee is immediately thrown, as it were, into the ocean of love the moment he begins to contemplate on Siva. While bathing in the ocean of love, the heart of the mystic is seized by such light as would terminate in the realisation of peace and joy. While experiencing the intoxicating ecstasy and madness, he at the same time has the experience of drowsiness, of sleep and quietude. As a result of such experiences he remains completely oblivious of all that is external. It is at this stage of experience that the mystic is so immersed in God as to be participating in his life.

"The one who knows (as to) how to taste the ambrosia of love (as well as) how to bathe in it delights in the greatest of all bliss" 36//

To the measure the sensibility of the mystic is refined, to that measure love attains unadorned simplicity, which means that as he progressively immerses from one void into another, he accordingly abandons his will to the extent that he feels nothing, knows nothing, and loves nothing. Ultimately he reaches the Center, which is the Self: where blazing flames of love consume all forms of duality by offering them as oblations to awful consciousness. Consequent! y he experiences inner contentment in terms of the fulfillment of the heart, and so attains perfect harmony between the self and the universe. Upon the divinisation of faculties, he experiences the Self as being immense and unbounded and in terms of which he realises his perfect identity with the Absolute. Thus he attains such state where love, in its true majesty and glory, conquers everything. Thus the saint shares the bounty of love with everyone as a result of his being in the plenitude of grace

Abhinavagupta's Bhagavad Gitā Samgraha Ślokas

Abhinavagupta's Concluding Verses

[Revealed by SWAMI LAKSHMANJOO]

The following verses are the essence of the Bhagavad Gitā, as composed by the renowned 9th century—CE philosopher/saint Abhinavagupta. These eighteen samgraha ślokas are based on Abhinavagupta's illuminating and original commentary, known as the Kashmiri version of the Bhagavad Gītā.

Kashmir Shaivism is a purely monistic philosophy. This means that only one being exists. It is not a duality where there is a separation between man and God. In Kashmir Shaivism, Lord Shiva, Lord Kṛiṣṇa and the limited human being-(jīva) are one and the same Being.

You see when you have not two thousand

Swami Lakṣmanjoo referred to these saṁgraha ślokas as "the Bhagavada Gītā in a nutshell."

Swamiji: In the first chapter, from view point of Abhinavagupta, he explains that there is a war going on between your senses, in the organs of senses there is a war always going on. In senses there is joy, and joy fights with sadness; sadness fights with joy. In the same way there is lust, lust fights with detachment, detachment fights with lust. It is all going on in one's own body-this war.

So this is the conclusion of the first chapter of Bhagavad Gītā.

second chapter of Bhagavad Cita.

Vidyāvidyobhayāghātasamghaṭṭavivaśīkṛtaḥ /
Yuktyā dvayamapi tyaktā nirviveko bhavenmuniḥ //1//

What a yogi has to do in this war, in this battlefield. . . Which battlefield? Of senses. That is good fighting with bad, right fighting with wrong, pride fighting with humility, humility fighting with pride; all the opposites are fighting every now and then. This fight does not persist only in waking state, this fight persists in dreaming state also; everywhere you find this fight. You have to observe this fight going on in your own brain, in your own mind.

What a yogi must do, there he says. Vidyāvidyobhayāghāta saṃghaṭṭa vivaśīkṛiaḥ. Should I do right or should I do wrong? When this fight goes on with right and wrong you are in a fix what to do . . Should we do this or should we do that?

Vidyāvidyobhayāghātaṁghaṭavivaśkṛtaḥ yuktā dvayamapi, if there is yukti, if there is a way, avenue is only dvayam api tyaktā don't think right, don't think of wrong, be relaxed in own nature, just enjoy, enjoy this fight. You just witness it, you have to witness it only. Don't get entangle in right and wrong this war. Just witness this war then you will get rid of this war, there will be neither right nor wrong.

This is the conclusion of the first chapter of Bhagavad Gītā.

Abhinavagupta has given conclusion of second chapter of Bhagavad Gītā.

aho nu cetasaiścitrā gatistyāgena yatkila / ārohatyeva viṣayā̃nchrayamstāmstu parityajet / /2//

This is wonderful treatment of mind found by yogīs, and exclusive, unique treatment. If you get attached with objective world you are in fact detached. If you get yourself detached from objective world you become attached to it.

For instance you renounce this whole world and go in dense wood and cave and start meditating. When you meditate there in cave, while meditating you think of that you have abandoned and renounced. You think, "I had a box there in my bedroom, and I had silver set in that bedroom and I have left it."

(Laughter...!)

Actually you have not left it, you are not leaving it, you are holding it! This is the way, this is the treatment of mind, so you must be cautious about it. One must be cautious about this treatment of mind, how it works.

So in fact by abandoning nothing will happen, by enjoying everything will happen. Enjoying you will be detached. While enjoying you won't think of that any more; that traces of impression won't remain. Traces also will be vanished while enjoying. And while detaching, being detached, you will get entangled with that.

This is the conclusion of second chapter.

Conclusion of third chapter of Bhagavad Gītā is.

dhanāni dārāndeham ca yo 'nyatvenādhigacchati /
kim nāma tasya kurvanti krodhādyaścittavibhramāḥ //3//

You see, when you have got two thousand rupees cash in dollars; you ask your wife to take care of this and go to office. When he comes back; Viresh has burnt them to ashes in kangari (fire pot) or in stove without your knowing. You become very rash with Denise. You say, "What you have done? You have lost everything, you have done great loss to me."

The conclusion of this is dhanāni dārāndeham ca, whenever you have earned, that bundle of dollars which was lying on that shelf, think "it is not mine"! At that very moment think, "it is not mine", think "Denise is not mine", think Viresh "is not mine," kim nāma tasya kurvanti then this wrath and losing of your temper won't happen at all. So you must do like that, you must remain in this world in this way, not in attached way.

This is the conclusion of third chapter.

Now the conclusion of the fourth chapter.

vidhatte karma
yatkiñcidakṣecchāmātrapūrvakam/tenaiva śubhabhājaḥ syustṛptāḥ karaṇadevatāḥ //4//

The conclusion of this chapter is, the flow of your organs of senses towards enjoying objective world... what you have to do there?

You have not to control your organs of senses. Don't control your organs. Viddhatte karma yat kiñtcit akṣecchāmātra pūrvakam, whatever you think, your mind says that, "I want that thing", get that thing and enjoy. Don't control your mind in that way. If you control your mind nothing will happen, you will only suffer.

Don't control it, do it according to the choice of your mind. Tenaiva śubhabhājaḥ syuḥ, then your mind will be directed, focused uninterruptedly with meditation; then you can meditate properly.

John: So the point here is, if you try to control your mind and do all these giving up this and that, then you're taking your attention away from maintaining awareness and controlling this. And that only causes more agitation.

Swamiji: Yes, that is the main point of this chapter.

Denise: So you should do whatever you want?

Swamiji: Whatever you want, you do and meditate!

Don't waste your time, don't waste your time in controlling. If you want to eat something, eat and sit and meditate. If you want to enjoy, go to pictures, go and see and come and meditate.

Denise: But meditate!

Swamiji: Yes meditate, it is meant for meditation. Enjoyment of world of senses is meant for meditation. It is not meant for not-meditation. You have to meditate and you have to enjoy this world for the sake of meditation. Go, do everything, but be focused towards meditation—remember Lord.

Fifth chapter:

sarvāņyevātra bhūtāni samatvenānupaśyataḥ / jaḍavadvyavahāro 'pi mokṣāyaivāvakalpate //5//

Whatever happens in this world, everything is possible in this world; one may die at any moment, any second one may die. Any second there will be fire, your house will catch fire and it will turn to ashes. Your bank draft of money will be smuggled. Everything is possible in this world. So what you have to do, do in this world for that point.

Sarvāṇyevātra bhūtāni samatvena anupaśyataḥ, be in equilibrium state always. If you have got one thousand dollars in your pocket, well and good; if you have nothing you are pauper, well and good – think like that. Then you will be liberated from the repeated births and deaths.

This is the conclusion of this (fifth chapter).

Now the conclusion of the sixth chapter according to the view - point of Abhinavagupta.

John: This is the unique interpretation of Bhagavad Gītā Swamiji: Yes... this you won't find in any other work.

bhagavannāmasamprāptimātrātsarvamavāpyate / phalitāḥ śālayaḥ samyagvṛṣṭimātr'valokite //6//

The conclusion of this sixth chapter is "take the name of God," remember God in each and every action in this world. When you remember God in each and every action in this world, everything is attained, you have achieved everything what is to be achieved.

It is just like if you have not achieved, if you feel that you have not achieved anything, you only remember God; if you just remember God you have achieved. Take this for granted that you have achieved. In this way, when paddy fields are ripe only there is one point, at the moment when the roots are wet with rainfall and they get moisture they will turn in ripening colour at once.

This is what happens by remembering God. If you remember God, it is already ripe, (even) if you don't perceive that it is ripe, it is ripe; there is only one question of a few days. Only the rainfall will reach there under the roots of those plants, and it will take the position of that ripening colour at once.

So it is only just remember God! Conclusion of sixth chapter.

Conclusion of seventh chapter is:

sphuṭam bhagavato bhaktirāhitā kalpamañjaī / sādhakecchāsamucitām yenāśām paripūrayet //7//

in well on closus in a distribution of the flow of Attachment for Lord Śiva must be created; you must create attachment for Lord Śiva. If you are attached to Lord Śiva, if you create love for Lord Śiva, intense love of Lord Śiva, nothing else, everything will be solved. All your problems of life will be solved. It is kalpamañjarī, it becomes kalpamañjarī, that tree of, that boon giver tree-kalpadruma.

For instance you need money. Money will come... with what?

Denise: By the love of Lord Siva.

Swamiji: By the love of Lord Śiva. Because Lord Śiva has promised to Arjuna that if you remember me always, all other care will be mine. I will see you that you are situated peacefully. Your money, your bank balance, your life, your enjoyment, your mother, your father, your wife, your children—I will take care of them. I take that responsibility on myself if you remember me, if you are attached to me. You just remain attached to me, I will do all other things of your life.

Eighth chapter:

sarvatattvagatena vijñāte parameśvare / antarbahirna sāvasthā na yasyām bhāsate vibhuḥ //8//

There is a trick how to find out the reality of Lord Śiva everywhere. This trick is sarva tattva gatatvena vijñāte parameśvare, you must find out the state of Lord Śiva in each and every action. If you find out the state of Lord Śiva in each and every action, that is just remember it. Just remember it while recording in your tape recorder, just remember him while struggling in your office, while doing things in your office. Remember him always!

Antar bahiṛna sāvasthā na yasyām - your Lord Śiva will appear to you always, he will be with you. If you go and see picture (cinema), you enjoy picture, Lord Śiva will be by your side sitting. He will relate what is the meaning of this picture. You won't see that he is Lord Śiva, you will only think that he is somebody; somebody has come to see the picture, and He will relate to you the things. So inside and outside Lord Śiva will be by your side always.

And ninth chapter-

advaite brahmaņi parā sarvānugrahaśālinī / śaktirvijrmbhate tena yatanīyam tadāptaye //9//

There are five energies of Lord Śiva; creative energy, protective energy, destructive energy, energy of concealing and energy of revealing his nature. But creative energy is meant for revealing his nature; protective energy is meant for revealing his nature; destructive energy, he destroys this whole universe just to reveal his nature; he creates this universe just for the sake of revealing his nature; he protects this universe just to reveal his nature; he destroys this universe just to reveal his nature; he destroys this universe just to reveal his nature; he conceals this universe just to reveal his nature, and he reveals this nature.

So his nature of revealing his nature is always shinning. What you have to do for that?

Just see and analyze that, where is that revealing nature in struggle, where is that revealing nature in sadness, in joy, in enjoyment, in sadness, in torture, where is that revealing nature. You must find out that revealing nature; everywhere is revealing nature existing. Bas!

John: So remembering the Lord means remembering Him in some form, or by maintaining awareness. . . what does remembering the Lord mean here, from the Saivite point of view?

Swamiji: Watch your breath in each and every second. . . yes, that is remembering Lord.

(Lord Kṛiṣṇa says) "O Arjuna! I will again repeat the same thing to you, I'll repeat it again for your full understanding because you are dear to me. Nobody knows me and I know everything!"

So the conclusion that Abhinavagupta has taken out of this chapter is:

icchāyimindriye vāpi yadevāyāti gocaram / haṭādvilāpayaṁstattatpraśāntaṁ brahma bhāvayet //10//

Whatever comes in action, in your mind or in your senses; any thought that comes in your mind, any thought; or any action you do according to your movement of senses, you should just hold that movement and divert it towards your own nature and see that nothing is moving, there is no thought at all.

This is the conclusion of this chapter!

Whatever thought comes in you, you should think there is no thought, don't worry. If you do something, some action according to this flow of your senses, think you have done nothing, it is just routine of organs, I have nothing to do with it.

Denise: It is like machine, just going on.

Swamiji: Yes.

This is the conclusion he has derived from this chapter.

In eleventh chapter he explains in practical way, "how I am everything in this world"! It is And pure and impure is the world of planets. called viśvarūpa; viśvarūpa means I am universal, I am fire, I am agni, I am water, I am earth, I am a boy, I am a girl, I am a woman, I am a mountain, I am an ocean, I am sky, I am everything. He' gives this doctrine practical shape in this chapter.

And conclusion of Abhinavagupta for this chapter is:

śuddhāśuddhavimiśrotthasamvidai kyavimarśanāt / bhūrbhuvaḥsvāstrayam paśyansamatvena samo munih //11//

All these three worlds which are existing in this cosmos, all these three worlds...

Because it is according to the science of Sāmkhya, it is not according to the science of Saivism where there are one hundred and eighteen worlds. They conclude that there are only three worlds; one is this world - (earth), one is antrikṣa world of stars, planets, and the other is the world of heavens. . . . So a yogī should feel that all these three worlds-one world out of it is pure, another world is impure, and another world is pure and impure both mixed...*

What is pure world?

Pure world is heaven. Impure world is ...

John: here we are, i.e. earth.

Swamiji: Yes.

*... In all these three worlds you must feel that God-consciousness is pervading in the same scale, i.e. it is not pure, it is not impure, it is not pure and impure. This way if you understand this whole universe of cosmos you will become one with Lord Siva.

This is the conclusion of this chapter.

The conclusion of the twelfth chapter now.

Paramānandavaivasyasañjātāvesasampadaḥ / svayam sarvāsvasthāsu brahmasattā hyayatnatah //12//

In this chapter Lord Kṛiṣṇa explains to Arjuna that unless you have attachment for Lord Śiva and love for Lord Śiva your meditation will be useless. You must do all this meditation and devotion of Lord Śiva with love, with attachment, with zeal—not routine like. If you meditate just like routine it won't have any effect. You should meditate with zeal! As you (Stephanie) are focused towards Bruce, and Bruce is focused towards you with zeal; you want to die in each other. In the same way you must meditate for Lord Siva, this way you should meditate.

Paramānanda vaivašya, when this vaivašya – vaivašya means longings—when desire for meeting Lord Śiva or Kṛiṣṇa or Viṣṇu has gone beyond its control, then, at that moment, yogi feels that the existence of Lord Śiva is everywhere present for him. It must go beyond its control.

You must feel that you can't live without Him!

As you feel you cannot live without John, and John feels he can't live without you. In the same way you must feel that you cannot live without the presence of God. When you do it then God is very near to you, God is not away from you.

This is the conclusion of the 12th chapter:

Now the conclusion of 13th chapter:

pumānprakṛtirityeṣa bhedaḥ saṁmūḍhacetasām / paripūrṇāstu manyante nirmalātmamayaṁ jagat //13//

In this chapter he has explained, Lord Kṛiṣṇa has explained to Arjuna, that there are two elements working in this world, one is prakṛti and one is puruṣa. Puruṣa is conscious, prakṛti is unconscious. Puruṣla is inactive, prakṛti is active.

John: This is Sāmkhya point of view.

Swamiji: Yes.

Prakṛti is active but unconscious, puruṣa is inactive but conscious. Prakṛti is blind, puruṣa is with eyes, with sight; he has sight, he can see, he can observe, but he cannot move. Prakṛti cannot observe but she can move, she moves.

So there are two elements existing in this universe, and the creation of world takes place only when both are united with each other.

For instance, if puruṣa wants to go to Amirakadal, because he is conscious but not blind; he knows what is Amirakadal but he cannot go there. So he unites himself with prakṛti, but prakṛti is unconscious. But he whips on her back to move, move right, move this way, move this way, move this way, move this way, and he reaches Amirakadal. So the presence of both are necessary—prakṛti and puruṣa

But from Saiva point of view pumān prakṛti, this is the element of prakṛti and this is the element of puruṣa which are united with each other for the construction of universe, ityeṣa bheda, this differentiated perception of these two elements is saṁmūḍhacetasā, this differentiated perception takes place in those who are ignorant. But those who are filled with God-consciousness, they feel that prakṛti and puruṣa are one; it is only one element, not two. So you must feel that these two elements are not two elements, it is one element, and that it is Śiva.

John: Then why does Lord Kṛṣṇa teach in this chapter on this differentiation between prakṛti and puruṣa?

Swamiji: Because it is Vedānta. But he has diverted towards Śaivism-Abhinavagupta.

Now the conclusion of 14th chapter.

Lasadbhaktirasāveśahīnāhamkāravibhramaḥ /
sthite 'pi guṇasammarde guṇātītaḥ samo yatiḥ //14 //

In this chapter he has described the differentiated position and different actions of three guṇas. Abhinavagupta here concludes from this chapter that lasat bhakti rasāveśa, that person, that yogī, in whom Lord Śiva's attachment and love is inserted hīnāhaṁkāra vibhramaḥ has no ego; ego in him is absolutely removed. There is no ego, ego does not remain in his mind. . . whose mind?

John: The yogī who is...

Denise: That one that Lord Siva loves.

Swamiji: Who has been inserted with the force of attachment towards Lord Śiva. Sthite'pi guṇa saṃmarde—no matter if he is sometimes entangled in satoguṇa, sometimes entangled in rajoguṇa and sometime in tamoguṇa. You know satoguṇa etc?

There are three waves moving in this world. One wave is of sāttvic, another wave is of rājas, and another wave is tāmas. They vibrate individuals, they don't vibrate universally. This is not universal vibration, this is individual vibration.

When you have got wave passing of sāttvic, it is not necessary that Bruce will also feel the same wave. He may feel tāmas wave. And some other person will feel rājas wave. When sāttvic wave functions love of God appears in you, in your mind; and love for meditation, attachment for meditation, and detachment for worldly pleasures takes place. When rājas wave is there, attachment for worldly pleasure takes place and love of God is ignored. When there is tāmas wave attachment for sleeping, bas, giddiness takes place; you want to lie down and sleep and snore.

But the person who has been inserted with the supreme flow of devotional wave of Lord Śiva sthite api guṇa sammarde, no matter if he is overwhelmed with all these three waves at particular times guṇātīta, he is beyond these waves. He does not become the play of these waves, he is above, he remains above these waves.

John: This is jñānī or yogī: . . . this is yogī in whom the love of Lord Śiva has been inserted?

Swamiji: Yogi.

In fifteenth chapter he says that this whole universe, this whole cosmos of three worlds, it is a tree, a big tree. And this tree is down below.

John: It's inverted, the roots stick up and...

Swamiji: ...branches down, and roots up. The roots are residing in the state of heaven and branches are in hell. So it is a upside down, this tree.

Abhinavagupta says that this universal tree—it is universal tree in one way—but this big tree is Lord Śiva Himself. This is the body of Lord Śiva who is expanded with roots and branches and trunk and everything.

Now what you have to do for this chapter? The conclusion of this chapter is, he says, "You must not meditate, i.e. you must not meditate on some particular time or particular place or particular vibrated āsanas (seats). If you do that then the other places will be excluded, and there will be no presence of Lord Śiva there appearing. Lord Śiva's presence will appear only in that particular period, particular place and particular time. So the meditation you must do you have to do everywhere, in each and every action of your daily activities.

tava kācana na stutirambike . . . (Quote from Abhinavagupta's Śiva-Śakti stuti.)

Abhinavagupta has written in this verse, addressing Mother Pārvatī: "O Pārvatī! singing your glory is not singing your glory; it is not exactly singing your glory who sings your glory. Who gives bad names to any other person, that is singing your glory; who plays fraud, that is singing your glory; who does every bad action, that is singing your glory! Singing your glory is all pervading, everywhere!"

If you tell me that, "I adore you O my mother! I adore you in each and every way of my daily life; I don't adore you only when I actually adore you, I adore you always. When I am weeping for my family members I am adoring you. I adore you always, this is the real way of understanding you!

hṛtvā dvaitamahāmoham kṛtvā brahmamayīm citim / 15a

You must focus your thought in brahma¹ always; in each and every action you must focus your mind towards one point. And this dvaita mahāmoham, this great illusion of differentiatedness that this is pure way of meditation and this is impure way of meditation this is meditation and this is not meditation this is absence of meditation. When you understand that "I am absent from meditation" you are gone, you are no more, you don't meditate at all.

So you have to remember Lord Śiva in each and every action. Remember him and love him.

Then what will happen to him?

laukike vyavahāre'pi munirnityam samāviśet// 15b

Even in worldly activities he is in trance, he is established in trance.

Now the conclusion of sixteenth chapter.

abodhe svātmabuddhyaiva kāryam naiva vicārayet / kintu śāstroktavidhinā śāstram bodhavivardhanam //16//

Now in this chapter the conclusion of this chapter is...by this explanation of mine you must not understand that you must do right or wrong, everything bad, you must become fraud in your life. No!

This is just to make you understand that this is not the only point, "to become pure and not fraud and away from bad actions, that is not the only point. You must not do bad actions. He says that you must not do bad actions; but you must understand that not doing bad actions won't carry you to that point. But still you must not do bad actions.

Whatever is prescribed and explained in śāstras, you must do according to the sayings of śāstras (holy scriptures). But at the same time you must feel that this way of my routine of life is not the ending point of my life. Ending point of my life is just to merge in that Lord Śiva.

So you must not boast of being pure. You must remain pure—don't boast of remaining pure. You must tell the truth, you must not tell lies, but don't boast of yourself that you are truthful person. Truthfulness only is not the goal, it is something else—that is attachment for Lord Śiva.

This is the conclusion of this chapter.

Now 17th chapter.

sa eva kārakāveśaḥ kriyā saivāviśeṣiṇī / tathāpi vijñānavatām mokṣārthe paryavasyati //17//

The thing what everybody does, jñānī also, i.e. realized person also does the same thing.

My master used to wake up at 1:00 a.m. and he would to go to bathroom. Then he would wash his face and call me for giving him a cup of tea. And he would take tea . . . At night you see. . (laughter!), at 1:30 a.m.! . . . he would take tea and with kulcha(bread) and then meditate up to 5:00 or 6:00. And then he would go and take hubble-bubble smoke. . .

He was smoking, he used to smoke. I don't know why he smoked, but it was something, everything was divine in him. . . . he smoked and then he (would tell me), "Make tea for yourself." And he would take a cup of tea again. He would go for walk, he would come and have a gossip with his friends. Whatever we do, he was doing the same way.

This is what he says sa eva kārakāveśa, you have to do the same thing what you were doing in the period of ignorance. In the period of ignorance the things you were doing, you have to do same things in the period of knowledge, in the period when you are realized. Sa eva kārakāveśa kriyā saivāviśeṣiṇī and that activity also is the same, it is not changed. His activity is not changed by the realization of God. Activity remains the same, everything remains the same, but the fruit is unique. The fruit from that action is the liberation from the pangs of repeated births and deaths. (The) fruit is separate, fruit becomes unique for him.

That differentiated intellect—differentiated intellect because of three guṇas, and which has become dull or stupid by vimoha, i.e. by being away from God-consciousnessyou must cut that, you must cut that intellect into pieces, you must shatter it. Then prāpya svātma vibhūti sundaratayā Viṣṇum vikalpātigam, and you must attain that state of Viṣṇu which is beyond thoughts, and which is beautified with his own nature of Self. When you reach that place then, yat kimcit svarasodydindriya nijavyāpāramātrasthite, whatever you do, whatever you act in this universe, that action becomes means to attain Lord Śiva—very action.

Vegetarian Quotes

To a man whose mind is free there is something even more intolerable in the sufferings of animals than in the suffering of man. For with the latter it is at least admitted that suffering is evil and that the man who causes it is a criminal. But thousands (now billions) of animals are uselessly butchered every day without a shadow of remorse. If any man were to refer to it, he would be thought ridiculous. And that is the unpardonable crime.

व्याख्या : ईश्वरस्वरूप स्वामी लक्ष्मणजू

समावेशात्मक भिवत का रस—स्रोत है उत्पलदेव का प्रसिद्ध स्तोत्र ग्रंथ ''शिवस्तोत्रावली''। कश्मीर शैवमत के दार्शनिक संदर्भों की भी उसमें कौंध है। शिव के प्रति अनन्य प्रेम की ऐसी मार्मिक अभिव्यक्ति इन स्तोत्रों में हुई है कि लगता है उत्पलदेव ने उनमें अपना हृदय उंडेल कर रखा है। इन स्तोत्रों को गा—गाकर ईश्वरस्वरूप स्वामी लक्ष्मणजू भाव—विभोर हो जाया करते थे। इस ग्रंथ के अनूठे आस्वाद को सामान्य पाठकों तक पहुंचाने के लिए हम श्रृंखलाबद्ध रूप से प्रस्तुत कर रहे हैं मूल स्तोत्रों सहित स्वामी जी द्वारा की गई उनकी अंतर्दृष्टिपूर्ण व्याख्या।

भक्तिवलास नामक ग्यारहवां स्तोत्र

इस स्तोत्र का दूसरा नाम औत्सुक्यविश्वसित भी है। 'औत्सुक्य' से तीव्रतम उत्कण्ठा और विश्वसित से भक्तजन के मानिसक विश्वास की दृढ़ता का अभिप्राय ध्विनत हो रहा है। प्रस्तुत स्तोत्र में भक्त के इस आत्मिक विश्वास की अभिव्यंजना हो रही है कि ''भगवान् के अनुग्रह से मेरी तीव्र अभिलाषा अवश्य पूरी हो जाएगी'' – अत: इस स्तोत्र का 'औत्सुक्यविश्वसित' यह नाम भी ठीक ही है।

जगदिदमथ वा सुहृदो बन्धुजनो वा न भवति मम किमपि। त्वं पुनरेतत्सर्वं यदा तदा कोऽपरो मेऽस्तु ॥१॥

*(प्रभो-हे: ईश्वर!), इदं - यह, जगत् - जगत, अथव - अथवा, सुदृदः - मित्रजन, वा - या, बन्धुजनः-बन्धु-बान्धव, मम - (इनमें से मेरा, किमिप-कोई भी, न-नहीं, भवित-है।, यदा पुनः-जबिफर, (तत्त्वतः-वास्तव में), त्वम्-आप, (एव-ही), मे-मेरे, एतत्-यह, सर्वम्-सब कुछ (अर्थात् मित्र, बन्धु-बान्धव आदि), (असि-हैं), तदा-तो, अपरः-(आप के अतिरिक्त) दूसरा, कः-कौन, (मे) अस्तु-(मेरा) हो?(अर्थात् किसी दूसरे सखा या संबन्धी की अपेक्षा नहीं है।)।

(हे भगवान् शंकर!) 'यह संसार, या मित्रों की मंडली, या अपने कुल से संबन्धित जन'-ऐसे-ऐसे नातों-रिश्तों के साथ मेरा किसी भी प्रकार का कोई सम्बन्ध नहीं है, जब केवल आप मेरे बन्धु, मित्र इत्यादि सब कुछ हैं, तब आपसे बढ़कर और कौन-सा संबन्धी होने की संभावना हो सकती है?

स्वामिन्महेश्वरस्त्वं साक्षात्सर्वं जगत्त्वमेवेति। वस्त्वेव सिद्धिमेत्विति याच्जा तत्रापि याच्जैव॥२॥

THE REPORT OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY.

स्वामिन्-हे स्वामी!, त्वं-आप, महेश्वर:-परमेश्वर, (असि-हें), (तथा इदं-और यह), सर्वं-सारा, जगत्-जगत, साक्षात्-प्रत्यक्ष रूप में, त्वम्-आप का, एव-ही स्वरूप, (असि-है), इति-इसिलए, वस्तु-(कोई निश्चित) वस्तु, एव-ही, सिद्धिम्-सिद्धि को, एतु-प्राप्त करे, इति-ऐसी, याच्जा-प्रार्थना, तत्रापि-ऐसी दशा में तो, याच्जा एव-प्रार्थना ही, (भवति-रह जाती है)।

हे स्वामी! परमाद्वैत की दृष्टि से आप ही महान ईश्वर हैं, और यह सारा जगत् का प्रपश्च भी आप ही हैं - (अर्थात् आपके स्वरूप से अलग या अतिरिक्त और किसी पदार्थ का सद्भाव ही नहीं है) तो ऐसी स्थिति में आपसे किसी एक विशेष वस्तु के सिद्ध होने की मांग करना केवल मांग बन कर ही रह जाती है (तात्पर्य यह कि वैसी याच्जा करने का तनिक भी औचित्य नहीं है)।

त्रिभुवनाधिपतित्वमपीह य-त्तृणमिव प्रतिभाति भवज्जुषः। किमिव तस्य फलं शुभकर्मणो भवति नाथ भवत्स्मरणादृते॥३॥ अन्वयः - नाथ इह यत् त्रिभुवन अधिपतित्वम् (अस्ति) (तत्) अपि भवत्जुषः तृणम् इव प्रतिभाति (अतः) तस्य शुभकर्मणः भवत्स्मरणात् ऋते किम् इव फलं भवति।

नाथ-हे स्वामी!, इह-इस संसार में, यत्-जो, त्रि-तीनों, भुवन-लोकों का, अधिपतित्वम्-स्वामित्व, (अस्ति-है), (तत्-वह), अपि-भी, भवत्-आप के, जुष:-(समावेश-युक्त) भक्त - जनों को, तृणम् - तृण के, इव - समान (तुच्छ), प्रतिभाति - दिखाई देता है, (अतः-अतः), तस्य-उस (स्वरूपसंपनमय), शुभ कर्मण:-शुभ-कर्म का (अर्थात् उस कर्म के करने वाले का), भवत्-आप के, स्मरणात्-स्मरण के, ऋते-बिना, किम् इव-भला और क्या, फलं-फल, भवति-हो सकता है!।

हे स्वामी! इस संसार में आपकी सेवा करने वाले समाधिनिष्ठ भक्तजनों को तीनों लोकों की आधिकारिता भी घास का तिनका जैसी प्रतीत होती है, (वास्तव में) उस आपकी भिक्त को ही महत्त्व प्रदान करने के रूप वाले पुण्यकर्म का, आपका नाम स्मरण करने से बढ़कर और क्या फल हो सकता है?

येन नैव भवतोऽस्ति विभिन्नं किञ्चनापि जगतां प्रभवश्च। त्वद्विजृम्भिमतोऽद्भुतकर्म-स्वप्युदेति न तव स्तुतिबन्धः॥४॥

(प्रभो-हे ईश्वर!), येन-चूंकि, भवत:-आप (के स्वरूप) से, विभिन्नं-भिन्न, किंचन-कुछ, अपि-भी, न अस्ति-नहीं है, च-और, जगतां-(समस्त) जगत् को, प्रभवः-उत्पन्न करने वाला, (अपि-(ब्रह्मा) भी), त्वद्-आप के ही स्वरूप का, विजृम्भितम् इव (अस्ति)-स्फार है, अतः-इसलिए, तव-(संसार की उत्पत्ति तथा नाश आदि) आप के, अद्भुत-चमत्कारपूर्ण, कर्मसु-कार्यों में, अपि-भी (भेद के अभाव के कारण), स्तुति बन्धः-(आप की) स्तुति करने (का प्रश्न ही), न-नहीं, उदेति-उठता।

(हे परमदेव!) चूँकि कोई भी पदार्थ आपसे कतई भिन्न नहीं है, (ब्रह्मा, रुद्र, विष्णु इत्यादि) जगत् के अधिकारी देवता भी आपके ही स्वरूप का विस्तारमात्र हैं, अतः ऐसे आश्चर्यजनक (ईश्वरीय) कृत्यों को संपन्न करते रहने पर भी आप की स्तुति करने का अवकाश ही कहां है?

विभो-हे व्यापक ईश्वर!, अहं-मैं, सर्वदा-सदैव, भवत्-आप (चित्-स्वरूप) के, अर्चन-पूजन में, निष्ठ:-लगा हुआ, च-और, त्वद्-आप (के स्वरूप) से, मय:-अभिन्न, अस्मि-बना रहता हूं, इति-इस प्रकार, अविरामम्-लगातार, अपि-ही (भवन्तं-आप की), भावयन्-भिक्त-भावना करता हुआ, अपि-भी, (अहं-मैं) स्वप्नग:-स्वप्न-अवस्था में जाकर कर, अपि-भी, स्वरसेन-आप से आप, (एव-ही), तथा-वैसा (अर्थात् आप के पूजन में लगा हुआ), किम् इव-भला क्यों, न-नहीं, स्याम्-होता हूं?

(हे प्रभु!) ''मैं आपकी अर्चना करने पर कटिबद्ध हूँ और आपके साथ एकाकार बना हूँ'' - (जागरण में) पल-पल इस प्रकार की भावना करता हुआ भी, स्वप्न अवस्था में प्रविष्ट होने पर स्वरसता से वैसी ही भावना क्यों नहीं कर पाता हूँ?

(हे भगवान् शंकर!) जिन भक्तवरों को आपके चरणकमलों से निकलने वाले सौरभ (सुगन्ध) का रंचमात्र भी स्पर्श हुआ होता है, उनको बड़े-बड़े देवताओं के द्वारा भी अभिलषणीय सारे (स्वर्ग आदि) सुखभोगों का संसार दुर्गन्धिपूर्ण कूड़ा-करकट जैसा प्रतीत होता है। हृदि ते न तु विद्यतेऽयदन्य-द्वचने कर्मणि चान्यदेव शंभो। परमार्थसतोऽप्यनुग्रहो वा यदि वा निग्रह एक एव कार्य:॥७॥

(हे महादेव!) ऐसी कोई भी स्थिति नहीं है कि आपके हृदय में एक बात, वाणी में दूसरी बात और करने में इन दोनों से भिन्न कोई तीसरी ही बात हो, अतः तत्त्वतः सरल स्वभाव वाले मुझ पर अनुग्रह एवं निग्रह इन दोनों में से, (अपनी रुचि के अनुसार) कोई एक ही करने की कृपा करें। मूढोऽस्मि दुःख कलितोऽस्मि जरादि दोष-भीतोऽस्मि शक्ति रहितोऽस्मि तवाश्रितोऽस्मि। शम्भो तथा कलय शीघ्रमुपैमि येन सर्वोत्तमां धुरमपोज्झितदुःखमार्गः॥८॥

हे कल्याणकारी देव! मैं तो निरा अनाड़ी, दु:खों का मारा, बुढ़ापा आदि दोषों से डरा हुआ और निर्बल व्यक्ति आपकी शरण में पड़ा हूँ, अतः हे प्रभु! जल्दी से जल्दी कुछ ऐसा कीजिए जिससे मैं कंटीले मार्ग से हटकर (सरलता से) सर्वोच्च पदवी पर पहुंच पाऊँवू।

हे वरद महादेव! अगरचि इस संसार में दुःख, बुढ़ापा एवं मृत्यु ये तीनों एक से बढ़कर एक असहा होते हैं, तो भी पलभर के लिए इनकी चर्चा रहने ही दीजिए क्योंकि यहां तो सबों के मान्य शब्द आदि प्रमेय पदार्थ ही क्षणभंगुर हैं। ऐसी स्थिति में भी अविनाशी सुख को चाहने वाला मैं आपके चिदानन्दभाव के चमत्कार से परिपूर्ण और प्रकाशिवमर्शमय चरणकमलों की जोड़ी का निरन्तर ध्यान करते रहने से श्रेष्ठ बने हुए चिरस्थायी जीवन की कामना कर रहा हूँ।

संकेत-

शास्त्रों में ऐसे भी उदाहरण मिलते हैं जहां सिद्ध पुरुषों ने भी चिरजीवन की याच्जा की है। इसके मूल में उनकी यह कामना रही है कि उनकी साधना उस चलते हुए जन्म में ही पूरी हो जाए ताकि उसको पूरा करने के लिए उनको दूसरा जन्म लेना न पड़े।

हे नाथ प्रणतार्तिनाशनपटो श्रेयोनिधे धूर्जटे दुःखेकायतनस्य जन्ममरणत्रस्तस्य मे सामप्रतम्। तच्चेष्टस्व यथा मनोज्ञविषयास्वादप्रदा उत्तमाः जीवन्नेव समश्नुवेऽहमचलाः सिद्धीस्त्वदर्चापरः॥१४॥

अन्वयः - हे नाथ प्रणत आर्तिनाशनपटो श्रेयः निधे धूर्जटे दुःख-एक आयतनस्य जन्म मरणत्रस्तस्य मे साम्प्रतं तत् चेष्टस्व यथा अहं त्वद् अर्चापरः (सन्) मनोज्ञविषय-आस्वादप्रदाः उत्तमाः अचलाः सिद्धीः जीवन्नैव समश्नुवे।

हे नाथ-हे नाथ!, प्रणत-हे शरणागतों के, अर्ति-दु:खो को, नाशन-नष्ट करने में, पटो-प्रवीण!, श्रेय: निधे-हे कल्याण सागरा! धूर्जटे-हे धूर्जटि शङ्कर!, दु:ख एक-केवल दु:खों का, आयतनस्य-घर बने हुए, जन्म-मरण-(तथा) जन्म-मृत्यु से, तस्तस्य-भयभीत बने हुए, मे-मेरे लिए, साम्प्रतं-अब, तत्-ऐसा, चेष्टस्व-कीजिए, यथा-िक, अहं-मैं, त्वद्-आप की, अर्चा-पूजा में, पर:-तत्पर (सन्-हो कर), मनोज्ञ-(चिदानन्द रूपी) मनोहर, विषय-विषयों के, आस्वाद-चमत्कार को, प्रदा:-देने वाली, उत्तमा:-श्रेष्ठ, अचला: - तथा चिरस्थायी, सिद्धी: - (स्वरूप - प्रथनात्मक) सिद्धियों को, जीवन्नेव-जीते जी ही, समश्नुवे-प्राप्त करूँ। (अर्थात् समाविष्ट होकर ही मैं आप की पूजा में लीन रहूँ और इस प्रकार जीवनमुक्त बनूँ)।

हे स्वामी! प्रणाम परायण भक्तों की पीड़ाओं का नाश करने में चतुर और कल्याण के सागर भगवान् शिव! अब तो सारे दुःखों के घर बने हुए और आवागमन के भय से डरे हुए मेरे लिए कुछ वैसा कीजिए जिससे मैं (इसी जीवन में) लगातार आपकी अर्चना करता हुए। (चित् चमत्कार जैसे) मनोहर विषयों का आस्वाद कराने वाली, उत्कृष्ट और अविनाशी सिद्धियों का उपभोग करता रहूँ।

Shri Gurudev Vachanamrit

From the Trika point of view there isn't the slightest difference between individual soul and Lord Shiva, it is just a play, a drama of His own nature.
